VOLUNTEER WITH US

Volunteers are an essential part of our team, working with all departments in both front-of house and office-based roles. Volunteering with us is a great way to learn new skills, gain new experiences and learn more about our fascinating site.

OPPORTUNITIES

We usually have a range of volunteer roles. As a volunteer, you might:

- Welcome and assist our visitors
- Lead tours showcasing the history of the Old Royal Naval College
- Fund-raise to support our conservation programme
- Assist our learning, collections and interpretation teams
- Provide behind-the-scenes office support

OLD ROYAL
NAVAL COLLEGE
GREENWICH

IN A NUTSHELL

The Old Royal Naval College is the centrepiece of Maritime Greenwich, a UNESCO World Heritage Site with a long and celebrated history spanning nearly 600 years. Once a royal palace and a naval hospital, then a naval officers' training college, today this must-see London landmark is a popular visitor attraction and home to the magnificent Painted Hall. Visitors can discover Tudor archaeological finds, enjoy award-winning tours, and explore the Christopher Wren-designed buildings and beautiful riverside grounds.

WHAT'S HERE NOW

- Painted Hall: An ornate masterpiece and the largest painted dining room in Europe.
- Chapel of St Peter & St Paul: A working chapel and a Neoclassical work of art.
- Grounds: Over 17 acres of baroque buildings comprising public spaces, lawns, and educational institutions.
- Discover Greenwich at the Visitor Centre: An interactive space that explains the history of the site over its long history.
